

PROFESSOR ANNAMARIA CACCHIONE

is an Italian scholar whose academic expertise lies in the field of linguistics and the didactics of Italian as a second language (L2). She holds a doctoral degree in this discipline and serves as a Senior Researcher at INDIRE, the Italian National Institute for Educational Documentation, Innovation, and Research. Her scholarly work is principally concerned with adult education, with a particular emphasis on literacy development and second language acquisition among migrant and non-native adult learners. She has played a significant role in research and policy initiatives associated with the Centri Provinciali per l'Istruzione degli Adulti (CPIA), institutions devoted to the promotion and advancement of adult education throughout Italy.
