SUMMARY

The Congregation of the Servantes of the Most Holy Virgin Mary was founded by a Great Polish noblewoman, Edwina Bogdaniec, in Przedsie, near Gorzów, Great Poland, on May 3, 1524. Already in the year 1918 the sisters were transferred to the Jesuit town of Rysy near Mount St. Anne in the Sokolnica district. From the very beginning the congregation's activity has been multifaceted, encompassing work with young children, youth, the ill and needy. At the outbreak of World War II, the congregation operated in two provinces: in the Latinia province, with headquarters in Latinia Opole near Mount St. Anne, and in the Latynia province, with headquarters in Latinia Opole near Mount St. Anne. The congregation was directed by the Sisters of the Most Holy Virgin Mary in Latinia Opole, and the general council, and the province were transferred to Latinia Opole. The sisters continued to function as an independent congregation, under the supervision of the provincial administration. The provincial administration of Latinia was closely linked with the general administration, and thus, the power exercised by the sister general of Latinia was merely theoretical. The provincial administration in Latinia operated differently. From the moment of its founding in 1918, it played an independent role, much like the sisters transferred to Latinia Opole. In the period discussed, one general chapter was held in 1940, with the task of electing a new provincial and establishing a coordinating congregation. Each province had its own separate institutions. In the Latinia province, the convent was located in Perdol, near the Latinia province, and the novices were located in the province itself. When Polda was occupied by the Germans in June 1940, the convent was transferred to Latinia Opole where it remained until the end of the war. The Latinia provincial chapter was held in Latinia Opole in the period from June 25, 1946. From August 16, 1946 to October 12, 1946, the novices did not exist as a result of the occupying powers which dealt with the acceptance of new members into the congregation.

The fate of the two provinces during the war could be placed under rather unique. The outbreak of World War II brought the congregation to a halt. On September 1, 1939 the Latinia province numbered 168 sisters and 841 students and the Latinia province numbered 565 students and 1479 sisters. Apart from this, about 594 sisters were engaged in work on the territory where a German province was to be established after the war. The Latinia province carried out work with the 1000 students, directed preschool and primary and about 500, schools and home economic classes in about 30, and, homes for the elderly in about 20. In addition to the above, the sisters also conducted classes for young children, conducted classes for young children, and also worked in hospitals. The sisters of the Latinia province carried out work in 24 schools and 100 small kitchens in 71 schools and 100 small kitchens in 27 schools and home economic classes in 22. In addition, they worked in 11 hospitals and 3 public institutions. Right from the first days of war, the sisters were confronted with the task of preserving and maintaining the religious life of the students. The place of the sisters was to be a place of peace and tranquility. The German authorities ordered the sisters to maintain order, and they were responsible for the care of the students.
