Work on this book began during my stay at the Linguistics Department of the University of California, Santa Cruz in 2001. I would like to thank the Fulbright Foundation for awarding me the fellowship that made it possible for me to do research in America. While in Santa Cruz, I profited from many discussions with Jim McCloskey. I am particularly grateful to him for his help with the Irish data and for sharing his expertise in the Minimalist Program with me. His comments on the draft of Chapter V have been very helpful and inspiring. In Santa Cruz, I took advantage of talking over some problematic issues with Judith Aissen, Jorge Hankamer, and Geoff Pullum. During the Linguistics Summer School in Santa Barbara, I had an opportunity to discuss the intricacies of Polish syntax with Prof. Howard Lasnik.

The actual writing of this book took place primarily during my stay at the Department of German Language and Literature in Frankfurt-am-Main in the years 2002-2003. I would like to express my gratitude to the Humboldt Foundation for enabling me to carry out my research in Germany. While in Frankfurt, I had an opportunity to discuss control phenomena with Prof. Günther Grewendorf. I am especially indebted to him for allowing me to present the results of my analyses during his doctoral seminars. Most valuable were the discussions I had about Restructuring with Prof. Joachim Sabel. I had a chance to present the results of my research to Peter Sells, to whom I would like to extend my heartfelt thanks for his feedback on Chapter IV of this book. I would also like to single out Eric Fuss, Melanie Klepp, Shin-Sook Kim, Ortrud Becker, and Rachel Hendery for many forms of their assistance.

This book would not have been written without the help of friends and colleagues associated with the Institute of English at the Catholic University of Lublin. First of all, I would like to thank Prof. Aidan Doyle for his invaluable help at various stages of writing this book. His comments on earlier versions of this work have been extremely useful and thought-provoking. His assistance with the Irish and English data could have always been relied on. For many years, I have received a lot of support and encouragement from Prof. Adam Pasicki. I am deeply indebted to him for his remarks on the first draft of this book. I have also received many forms of assistance from Prof. Eugeniusz Cyran. I am particularly grateful to him for supporting my work on Irish syntax and for the technical help he provided with editing this work. My special thanks go to Prof. Edmund Gussmann for maintaining interest in my work and for showing sympathy towards it over the years. I would like to express my gratitude to Prof. Anna Malicka-Kleparska and Prof. Bogdan Szymanek, who have always shown approval for my projects. Thanks are also due to Prof. Sabine Heinz, Dr Magdalena Charzyńska-Wójcik, Dr Konrad Klimkowski and Prof. Iwan Wmffre, who have helped me in various ways.

I am also deeply indebted to Prof. Piotr Stalmaszczyk for commenting on earlier drafts of the book and for showing interest in my work in general.

Last but not least, I would like to thank my Irish informants: Prof. Dónall Ó Baoill, Prof. Máire Ní Chiosáin and Fiachra Mac Gorain for their patience in judging my data.

The publication of the book has been partly sponsored by the Cultural Relations Committee of the Irish Department of Arts, Sport and Tourism, to whom I extend my thanks.
