

TWO NOTIONS OF TRUTH
AND TWO CONCEPTS OF THE WORLD

S u m m a r y

There are two basic notions of truth (objectivism and subjectivism) connected with two understandings of the world (respectively, realism and idealism). Author claims, against deflationists, that the concept of truth is not metaphysically neutral. Tarski's T-schema requires some metaphysical reading. Reading the schema from the left to the right, leads to realism. Reading the schema from the right to the left, leads to anti-realism. The concept of truth is the part of some ontological package deal or alethic network. There are two basic packages, competing since centuries, that focus on two poles in human cognition: subject and object.

Summarized by Renata Ziemińska

Słowa kluczowe: prawda, realizm, schemat T, pakiet ontologiczny.

Key words: truth, realism, T-scheme, ontological package.

Information about Author: Dr. hab. REANATA ZIEMIŃSKA, Prof. of US — Institute of Philosophy at the University of Szczecin; address for correspondence: ul. Krakowska 71, PL 71-17 Szczecin; e-mail: zieminre@univ.szczecin.pl vel renata.zieminska@whus.pl